

NEW NIH Data Management and Sharing Policy

The NIH has a new Data Management and Sharing Policy that goes into effect for NIH applications submitted after January 25th 2023. NIH requires all applicants planning to generate scientific data to prepare a Data Management Sharing Plan that describes how the scientific data will be managed and shared. A brief summary of this new policy is attached, and a list of NIH activity codes subject to the Data Management & Sharing Policy can be found here: <https://sharing.nih.gov/sites/default/files/flmgr/List-of-Activity-Codes-Applicable-to-DMS-Policy.pdf>.

CARTI previously hosted an information session on “Getting to Know the New NIH Data Management and Sharing Policy”. The slides from that session are attached and a recording from the session can be found here. In addition, UMB has resources available through the HSHSL library for creating a Data management plan (DMP) which can be found here <https://guides.hshsl.umaryland.edu/c.php?g=531301&p=3912920>. There is a free, web based service through DMPTool (<https://dmptool.org/>) that provides a step wise process for developing a DMP based on your research.

Lastly, we have included a list of resources available through the UMB HSHSL library and the NIH to assist with creating a Data management plan.
