COMPUTER PROGRAMMING EXPERIENCE

- 1988 Developed a clinical database system for the Vascular Surgery Service at the Washington DC VA Medical Center (programmed in DBASE III).
- 1993 Developed a networked clinical database system for the UMB Transplant Surgery Division (programmed in Foxpro, C). This system functioned as a transplant-specific electronic medical record and research tool. It was used by the physicians, nurse coordinators, and support staff during the seven year period when the University of Maryland had the largest kidney transplant volume in the U.S. It featured an automatic, custom-built electronic interface to download and parse results from the hospital's laboratory computer system.
- 2001 Developed a clinical database system for the UMB Transplant Surgery Division to process evaluation and management information generated by physicians seeing patients to be placed on the waitlist (programmed in Visual Basic, SQL Server). This system was in production for six years, and featured the use of fingerprint identification units for secure login.
- 2007 - present Developed a networked database application for the UMB Department of Surgery professional fee billing office, including all the system's planning, design, coding, testing, implementation, and maintenance. It is programmed in C#, uses Internet Information Services for secure messaging, and SQL Server for data storage and retrieval. It contains approximately 50,000 lines of code. This system has been continuously in production as mission critical software since 2008. It is used by the Department coders for electronic bill creation and coding (CPT, ICD10). It creates the bills for approximately $70 million in annual professional fee charges. It features HIPAA-compliant security; automatic custom-built electronic interfaces between Epic clinical and operating room documents, and the University Physician Incorporated's accounts receivable system.
- 2018 – present Developed a networked database application for the UMB Division of Transplantation At-Risk Team to track transplant recipients in need of increased oversight and management (programmed in C#, SQL Server).
